If you've ever wanted to date a lovely Vietnamese woman and have been afraid to do so simply because you don't know how, we're here to help. We understand that dating someone from a different country, who has a different approach to everything, can be a scary experience. You don't know what the proper manners are, you don't know what they like and dislike. There are problems of saying the wrong thing, of misunderstanding a gesture or a word, and so many other little nuances that may seem like they aren't much but amount to a lot.

There are some things that if you keep in mind, your date will go effortlessly and you will make a wonderful impression on the Vietnamese girl you're interested in. First of all, make sure you're dressed well. This doesn't mean wear a tuxedo to your first date. Wear what you're comfortable in most; wear something that depicts you as a person, and about your personality. When you dress well, she feels important because you made the effort to look good for her.

When going to pick her up, or when meeting her at the restaurant, always take a small present. It doesn't have to be fancy, just flowers or a little candy will do. Vietnamese women love giving and receiving gifts, it is a token of affection for them. She will love that you thought of getting her something. One thing to remember is to try to do something out of the ordinary. Instead of going on a conventional dinner date, try doing something fun. Take her to the museum, or go on a picnic. You can also start small, meet up for coffee or drinks. If you try to get to know a lovely Vietnamese woman before you take her out, she feels more comfortable with you and the date is expected to be so much better.

While you're at the date, stay calm and relaxed. Try not to be in a very formal setting as you guys are still getting to know each other and formality puts pressure on people. Compliment her, make jokes – but not at the expense of others, make small talk, and find common interests. Once you've found common ground your date will go much smoother. Try not to pressure her into moving too fast and treat her like a queen. There's no doubt that by the end of such an amazing date, she won't already start falling for you.
